The aim of the present study was to determine whether allelic variants of genes associated with atopy are also associated with an increased risk of asthma in a population of children and young adults with asthma and their first-degree relatives. DNA from white blood cells was genotyped by means of multiplex polymerase chain reaction, capillary electrophoresis and ABI PRISM 310 Genetic Analyzer using single nucleotide polymorphisms (SNPs) of genes known to be associated with atopy and/or asthma.

Allele frequencies of 30 SNPs in the intron of BLK, HLA-DQA1, IL13, TNFRSF13B and also in the 2'-5' oligoadenylate synthetase 1 gene (OAS1) were determined in 50 children with asthma and their 23 healthy relatives. Significant associations were detected between the rs2857134 (C) OAS1 allele (wild-type/mutant-type = 55/37) and the disease (OR: 1.76; 95% CI: 1.12-2.78). There was no significant difference in the allele frequencies of the remaining 25 SNPs. No association between the rs3132351 (A) allele (wild-type/mutant-type = 7/23) of the IL13 gene and the disease was detected. However, there was an association between
